tune me into the wild side of life,

i'm an innocent young child sharp as a knife.
take me to the garretts where the artists have died, show me the court rooms where the judges have lied.

let me drink deeply from the water and the wine, light coloured candles in dark dreary minds, look in the mirror and stare at myself and wonder if that's really me on the shelf.

and each day i learn just a little bit more,
i don't know why but i do know what for,
if we're all going somewhere Let's get there soon, this song's got no title just words and a tune.

take me down the alleys where the murders are done, in a vast high powered rocket to the core of the sun.
want to read books in the studys of men, born on the breeze and die on the wind.

we should welcome the excesses of youth -

just as we welcome the exuberance of spring,
looking forward
with delight to the time when people with such an imaginative
program for life
become mellow and mature-not only gentle as doves, but wise as serpents.

-Alan Watts

close the doors,
put out the lights

you know they won't be home tonight.
the snow falls hard and don't you know the winds of thor are blowing cold-they're wearing steel that's bright and true they carry news that must get through.
they chose the path where no-one goes they hold no quarter
they ask no quarter.

-john paul jones
jimmy page
robert plant (led zeppelin)

you can have your buildings and your heavy 'rithmetic

i don't need no crowded streets or city slicker tricks i just need to be somewhere where i can move around, look down at my toes and i can still see the ground.

THE SILENT LANGUAGE OF FRIENDSHIP

let there be laughter and sharing of pleasures .
for in the dew of little things the heart finds its meaning and is refreshed.

-kahlil gibran

sometimes
you dream,

sometimes it seems
there's nothing there
at all.
you just seem older
than yesterday,
and you're waiting
for tomorrow to call.

you draw to the curtains, and one thing's for certain you're cozy in your little room
the carpet's all paid for,
god bless the t.v.
let's go shoot a hole
in the moon.

-bernie taupin

kiss the day goodbye!

the sweetness and the sorrow, wish me luck, the same to you but i can't regret what i did for love, what i did for love.

look my eyes are dry
the gift was ours to borrow,
its as if we always knew,
and i won't forget what i did for love,
what i did for love.

love is never gone,
as we travel on,
love's what we'll remember.

kiss the day goodbye
and point me towards tomorrow.
we did what we had to do won't forget, can't regret what i did for love,

-edward kleban

a year begins anew

the fall semester began with a promise of change. returning students witnessed the difference in housing. new women's dorm housed freshmen for the first time. the traditional housing of freshmen on the first floor of men's dorm was broken. greensboro dorm was full.

music students adjusted to a somewhat undesirable third floor main as odell was under repair. the most noteworthy change came in attendance. enrollment was up almost twenty percent.

most students settled in with little trouble. the semester began smoothly until a series of small incidents began. reports came from the administration that students would be charged for water damage in greensboro dorm caused during a panty raid. a rash of small fires hit the same dorm. a dorm at guilford college burned down and students began to get scared. bomb threats were called into main building. several prowlers were seen in new womens' dorm. a resident of men's dorm was mugged when he went to do his laundry in the basement. a former g.c. security guard was arrested in downtown greensboro for robbing a bank. many students took the incidents lightly.

many students found academic relief through organizational activities.

the g. c. chapter of student national educators of america sponsored a student teachers' tea in lea center, which enabled senior education majors to meet the teachers they would be training under.

circle k sponsored the annual bloodmobile drive for those who were brave enough to face the needle.

student government began its year with a training retreat under the leadership of president sandra mccrary. social life presented an excellent list of motion pictures to be shown on campus which included: "paper moon", "mahogany", "the longest yard", "blazing saddles", "alice doesn't live here anymore", "lady sings the blues", and many more.

a new chapter of youth for easter seals was established. a gospel choir was also begun. the newspaper became the collegian again. ann lassiter, the editor-in-chief, and her staff sought a new style which reflected more quality.

on the sports scene, a women's volleyball team was organized. due to a lack of experience, the team failed to win a match. they did show considerable improvement, however.

most students spent their weekends partying, playing hide-and-go-seek with the resident dorm directors. on mondays, beer cans sprung up all over campus like mushrooms.

some went to their homes, the beach, carolina, or elsewhere.

the student center, with its new furniture, began closing at 12:00, making it harder than ever to get a pool table.

some just took it easy . . . and of course, a few hit the books.

beauty and the beast

circle k sponsored the first annual womanless beauty pageant. beauties from all walks of g.c. life competed for the coveted title. students were the judges as they cast their monetary votes to decide who was the fairest of all. aptly enough, the gala event was held in the lush g.c. cafeteria. circle k dispelled rumors that the boys took to the streets after the contest in order to raise more money for the club.

halloween brought out the best in many students. through the efforts of the student council for exceptional children and the g.c. chapter of the student national educators of america, underprivileged children from the greensboro area were brought on campus to "trick or treat". many of the students seemed to enjoy dressing in the latest masquerade attire more than the children. a very large number of dorm residents participated by marking their doors with orange pumpkins.

halloween night was also the scene for mr. well's festive masquerade party in the cafeteria. the contest brought forth witches, movie stars, the nbc peacock, and the sexy flapper on the opposite page, just to mention a few. the winners included a two-headed scholar from the university of uranus and the scarecrow, cowardly lion, tin woodsman, and dorothy from the "wizard of oz."

after the cafeteria party, some students went to another party that was given for local underprivileged children. the party, which was held in a study lounge in new women's dorm, featured clowns, a fortune teller, and scores of games and refreshments.

students were involved in halloween parties off campus also. special education students gave a party at the cerebral palsy school. student tutors helped at the west market united methodest church's haunted house. youth for easter seals helped with parties given at the y.m.c.a.

halloween, generally considered a child's holiday, was a time for escape for g.c. students. as november began, everyone stepped back down to reality. feelings of fulfillment and madcap memories became mere ghosts of the mind. when the excitement died down, truth of exams not too far away was realized.

ONLY AN ORPHAN GIRL^{or} A Soul-stirring Drama of Human Trials and Tribulations in Four Acts

angie connor and eddie cobb

one of the year's highest moments in entertainment was the g.c. players' delightful fall production of "only an orphan girl", a spoof of the henning nelms classic melodrama.

to enhance the production, ragtime pianists set the mood on their upright player pianos. acts were featured between each scene of the play also, including a high-stepping rendition of the "varsity drag" by flappers, singing and dancing vaudeville acts, and a short ballet to ragtime called the "deep purple rag", danced by the carolina ballet theatre of greensboro college.

the real charm of the night came in the play itself, however. the audience was urged to boo and hiss at the villain and to cheer at the hero and lucy, who was billed as "a ray of sunshine". the climax of the play featured the old buzz saw gag. everyone laughed and a good time was had by all!

"marry me and the mortgage shall be yours."

founder's day

founder's day was celebrated on november 23. a ceremony was held on campus behind main. the choral union sang and dr. wilkinson shared "selected historical highlights." after the ceremony, a barbecue luncheon was held for the entire school a founder's day brochure featured main building as it appeared in the 1880's (top), early 1900's (middle), before the fire of 1941 (bottom left), and its present appearance.

the aquabelles' christmas show featured jack-in-the-boxes, dolls, and toy soldiers in an imaginative program based on popular christmas carols. santa claus, himself, was also on hand.

as christmas neared, so did the end of the semester. students crammed for exams, leaving thoughts of christmas behind for the moment.

a christmas service was held in the chapel which featured the christmas story read in different foreign languages.

music students decorated the drab windows of third floor main with christmas lights, despite fire restrictions.

art students held advent workshops in which they learned how to make unusual crafts that could be used for presents.

before leaving for home, many students exchanged christmas presents and cards amongst themselves. others celebrated their last exams. when all was done, everyone went home for the holidays. the semester was over and greensboro college was left to spend christmas alone.

the nation as a whole "survived." in a word, that best describes the year 1976, which is not to say that survival doesn't draw great joys and sorrows in its modern-day, freeze-dried, saran-wrapped period of twelve months. the last half of the year felt a nation which suffered from the post-bicentennial blues.

the nation survived, profited from, and took the toll of sensationalism, in sex, politics, and the hearth of it all, the home. elizabeth ray became an instant sex symbol when she uncovered that she had been involved in sex scandals with representative wayne hays. the "real" jimmy carter was uncovered in a playboy interview. the first amendment was in question when sex star harry reams was prosecuted in tennessee for having acted in "deep throat."

some people didn't survive at all. the philadelphia legionnaire's disease mysteriously claimed the lives of some of the hundreds of conventioners who attended the annual event. those who weren't hit, lived in fear of the unknown killer. when the government began swine flu vaccination campaigns, it sounded like a good idea. some of the many who were vaccinated, however, developed a rare case of paralysis. twenty-six children were kidnapped in california. and the world mourned over the deaths of such world figures as mao tse tung, andre malraux, and russian biologist t.d. lysenko. entertainment figures rosiland russell, anisa jones, godfrey cambridge, and jack cassidy also died, as well as chicago mayor richard daley, smokey the bear, and the great artist alexander calder.

in the rest of the world, africa was torn by racial conflict, earthquakes took their toll in iran, and great britain, once the mightiest nation of them all, almost went bankrupt.

"A Star Is Born."

newsline

the united states became the first country to send a space vehicle to mars. viking 1 landed and sent pictures back to earth. no evidence of life on mars was found.

in their spare time, many americans still went to discos and talked on their c.b.'s. skateboards also became very popular forms of entertainment. "rocky" was the big movie and sylvester stallone became an instant hero. other popular flicks were "a star is born", "network", "marathon man", "silver streak", "the omen", "carwash", "the sailor who fell from grace with the sea", "bound for glory", "the front", and a remake of "king kong". for those who chose to stay home, such blockbusters as "gone with the wind" and "chinatown" came to television. nbc celebrated 50 years in broadcasting and abc became the top network. other changes in t.v. included barbara walters switch to abc news and chevy chase's farewell to "saturday night live".

art lovers enjoyed a rare chance to view the treasures of egyptian pharaoh tutankhamun's tomb. the exhibit began its six-city nationwide tour of the u.s. at washington's national gallery and some people waited in line up to eight hours to see the magnificent collection. elsewhere in art, christo's 24 1/2 mile "running fence" in california stirred quite a bit of interest.

in music, paul mccartney's "silly love songs" became the number one hit of the year. peter frampton's album "frampton comes alive" broke the record in album sales with an unbelievable sale of thirteen million plus copies.

in sports, the cincinnati reds won the world series and the russians won the summer olympics. standouts in the games were nadia comanecchi, who won four gold medals in gymnastics, kornelia ender who won three gold, one silver, and one bronze in swimming and the u.s. men's swimming team who won every gold medal in that event. elsewhere, pele retired from soccer and renee richards made the switch from men's to women's tennis.

seniors evaluate educational and social opportunities of greensboro college what have you been hearing about greensboro college? does g.c. meet with your approval? in a questionnaire given to all seniors, the following questions were asked:

- 1) do you feel that a small, private liberal arts college provides a well-rounded education and what are its advantages and disadvantages? 2) what types of opportunities does greensboro college offer both socially and educationally? approximately one-third of the seniors returned the questionnaire. on the issue of a well-rounded education, most everyone agreed - "a small, liberal arts college does indeed provide a well-rounded education for those students who want such an education."

"the size of the student body coupled with the close proximity of the faculty and administration allows each student the avenues by which they may achieve a well-rounded education."
 clarence caldwell agreed, but offered another view . . . "it does not have enough variety of courses, which tends to make the student seek courses elsewhere."
 gloria foster injected this . . . "education may be obtained from any institution of learning, no matter the size. though small in number, there's a range of attention as well as opportunity given by the faculty and the school." expressing the sentiment of practically everyone was sally logue, who said, "the education i have received here has certainly rounded me out whether i liked it or not!"

 the majority of the seniors failed to answer the second question. jeff jenkins seemed to be happy with his social life at greensboro college. he said, "the wide variety of students here offers a social opportunity one can't find everywhere. because of the small size of g.c., we can come into close contact with people from different areas of the country and different religious and ethnic backgrounds." the recent 'sit-ins' caused people to express themselves without reserve.
 "socially, greensboro college is so far behind that it will never catch up with what is happening in the world, no matter what kind of visitation or social system is worked out by the administration, which calls the shots . . . g.c. has tried to offer its traditional opportunities, but offering these to the wide spectrum of students here has proven to be a problem . . . the social needs are not being met in a way to reach the majority of the students, and college is too late to start dictating social habits."

snow ushers in the new semester students were greeted by snow when they returned for the second semester. the snow was only a foretaste of the bitter winter that was to come. luckily, the school's ancient heating system held out and most greensboro college residents survived the harsh cold.

over the christmas holidays, men's dorm was broken into and about thirty rooms were victim to theft and dishevelment. most of the stolen items were recovered and returned to their owners, however.

once again, greensboro college entered a women's basketball team into competition, after a year's absence. as is tradition, the team suffered from a lack of experience, funding, and support. the girls did struggle with a tremendous amount of effort and are looking towards great progress in the future.

despite snow-covered grounds and bitter cold weather, life went on as usual. students had to make adjustments, however. day students, especially were inconvenienced by poor road conditions. recitals were still held though, as were coffee houses, study breaks, sunday night movies, and virtually everything else.

inside the cuckoo's nest

marsha little, amy snyder, robin gray, and dawn roach with the cold weather outside, most students remained inside as much as possible. this wasn't too much of an inconvenience however, as most everyone found that they could have as much fun inside as out.

the school was left in the dark one weekend when a power line failed south of the school. for some it was scary but for most it was exciting. the security guards and the dorm residence directors were affected the worst. they had to keep strangers and members of the opposite sex from entering the dorms.

as spring neared, student dissent was in the air. the student government had called for more visitation and the faculty had put off the vote. when they finally met to vote on a sunday afternoon, the resolution was put down overwhelmingly. student reaction was immediate! over 250 students gathered for a sit-in protest in new women's dorm the same night. this was followed by sit-ins in men's the next night and greensboro dorm the following night. the administration got nervous when the news came out in the newspapers and on television. one administrator from the student services office threatened t.v. cameramen, who were on hand to film a sit-in in men's dorm. a meeting was held in cowan with many faculty members, administrators, and students attending. it was agreed that terms could be met.

change is inevitable at g.c.

slab rewrites rules for college life

a group of interested students were appointed by student government to rewrite the visitation policy. the group called themselves SLAB (student living advisory board) and they were headed by sandra mccrary. it was immediately discovered that many of the rules of greensboro college were in question. the committee therefore set out to virtually rewrite the handbook. they met every night for several weeks and some of the meetings lasted for hours.

SLAB called in people who represented different aspects of college life to help them underscore the needs and problems of college life.

when the final recommendations were handed in, it was pretty clear that greensboro college was due for a complete face lift. the recommendations were accepted by the college life board and it was promised that many of the changes would go into affect fall 1977.

chief among the changes was the new visitation policy. students had wanted a trial period of visitation during the week to prove that it could work, yet the faculty had voted it down. their reasons were the lack of security in the dorms and the absence of responsible visitation policy. with this in mind, slab wrote a new policy that had bounderies that were from 8:00 a.m. until 12:00 p.m. (1:00 a.m. on weekends) every day. they called for a receptionist at the front door of each dorm and better security measures. the new policy also required the reconstruction of the dorm councils. the dorm councils would become dettached from student government and would include residence advisors along with the dorm representatives. all those who broke visitation would be dealt with in the dorm. in many ways, the new rules appeared stricter. but in order to get privileges, students had to show responsibility. among the other areas dealt with by slab were the student center, honor code violations, and student rights. due to their hard work and dedication, greensboro college showed promise of change that would better suit the needs of college life.

spring is in sight

both the tennis and the golf teams represented greensboro college well as they both had good season. as the weather toned down a bit, many students realized that the end of the year was getting closer and closer. seniors, under the leadership of president ronnie melton, planned graduation.

many campus organizations planned activities for next year. ako held its spring induction. circle k and the g.c. players held banquets.

the first half of 1977 brought forth a challenge for americans -- a challenge to survive the cold winter, a challenge to fight rising costs, and a challenge of a changing lifestyle which many would have to adapt to whether they were used to it or not. the nation looked to jimmy carter, the new president of the united states for answers. as with all new presidents, his popularity began to decline immediately after taking office; especially due to such decisions as freeing all draft evaders from the vietnam war of conviction, which drew much opposition. many met the challenge and refused to be depressed about the state of the world. some turned to entertainment as an alternate and such fads as skateboarding and frisbees became very popular. and then there was the huge popularity of farrah fawcett majors. everything that had her likeness reproduced on it became a hot item. her television series "charlie's angels" became a top-rated show and a poster with her in a tight-fitting red bathing suit became the most popular poster in history, even topping the betty grable poster that had been the top-selling pin-up for many years. elsewhere in the nation, lifestyles were questioned. anita bryant's crusade against homosexuals resulted in a decisive repeal of an ordinance in dade county, florida which allowed for non-discrimination in teaching. after many years of construction and controversy, the alaskan pipeline finally opened. in the first few days of its operation, repeated problems arose.

in a highly-touted national controversy, gary gilmore was given the right to execution, when he challenged the death sentence. elsewhere in prisons, james earl ray, the assassinator of martin luther king escaped and was recaptured after several days.

the nation mourned over the deaths of joan crawford and freddie prinze, who took his own life.

on the motion picture scene, the movie of the year was undoubtedly "star wars". the hugely successful film became a phenomenon and was an immediate science fiction classic. other hits were "the late show", "new york, new york", "fun with dick and jane", "the deep", "smokey and the bandit", "black sunday", "a bridge too far", and "annie hall". the top picture of 1976 was given to "rocky" along with several other oscars.

the highly successful abc miniseries "roots" became the most watched show ever on television and its author alex haley immediately became a cult figure. on broadway, "annie" swept the tonys and the show reflected the optimism of the nation.

the music world was led by "fleetwood mac" as their albums and concerts sold out all over the nation.
